Only one min, a sailor, was thrown safely on the beach by the waves. In his pocket was a tin tobacco-box, a pipe, and a flint and steel. Wringing the water from his clothes, he seated himself, lighted his pipe and with true British phlegen proceeded to consider his situation. The moral of which is that when an Englishman, having the means, refuses to smoke, he is in very bad form For example, here is a man who says, " I always enjoyed my pipe, but now I couldn't takea whiff." To be sure, there was a reason, and he puts it in this way. "Up to Michaelmas. 1837." he says, "I was a strong, healthy man, About this time I begin to feel bid at my stomach and bad no relish for food. I had a Bad tasts in the mouth, and after earlier I would ratch and vomit until the aster one dout of my eyes: and so bad was this that my wife had to hold my had. CHAPTER XXVII. - Continued. The pied d terre settled, John Crucival readily meenred the use of a railway arch, and then, appreciating the leverage of what our American consins would call a boom, issued a mild poster: "JOHN JONES. JOHN JONES. JOHN JONES. door. Come and hear what he has to say ! Every avening-Sundays and week days !

RAILWAY ARON 17. *Entrance free. No collection." This had the effect of drawing together ar andience. He could speak fairly, and had often enough addressed his tenants and neighbours on public occasions. But it is one thing to confront a deferential and sympathetic audience—another to cast your pearls before swine; as he soon found out experimentally.

He had not said fifty words before a laugh interrupted him. Then when he flushed up, a type of Irishry. cheer arose, and he paused. "Hoot! He's nobbut a Cockney!" granted one northerner, contemptuously; the denizons of Cockaigns being apparently revolting objects to the borio intelligence. "Badad, thin!" chaffed an Irishman, "the

"I have come here," he said, "as a humb! man, to see if I can be of any use to the people who toil in this land of darkness. Don't reject me without a hearing. I don't want your money and would refuse it, if offered. I am not work. ing for pay, but simply for conscience sake, my oue object being to try and bring to Ferreesham that which it sorely needs—more light." He spoke with emotion, and the quiverings of a frame that seemed almost convulsed by feeling told on their dull natures. "Friends," he continued, "let me begin be taking you into my confidence, for I hope in return to gain yours. You behold a man wh once was lifted above poverty, and supremel happy in the possession of a partner, whose presence lightened his home with perpetual supshine. "Naa-naa," from a dozen Baptists. He had now succeeded in getting round him a knot of supporters, and the more resolutely he showed fight, the more earnest they became. Presently this feeling of warmth began to spread, and the consciousuess of mastery nerved his speech. He was not like a man with a fad or a thems. He had a message to deliver, and was able to take for his basis Christianity, not as a creed—or jumble of contradictory creeds but a fact. He began almost defeated; he ended with a win, for a number of honest people came Then he took their addresses, and wished them

They thought his brain affected, as well they might, for at times it wandered, and he professed that a voice was sounding from different corners of bischambor. The doctor, however, though anxious cor corning his mental condition, attributed this ugly symptom to bloodlessness, and took heart of grace at a slowly, but surely, improving pulse. Possibly he had made a mistake in dragging a patient barely convalescent to a home fraught with such bitter memories as alone might upset the balance of a weakened brain.

It was during this interval of incertitude that letter arrived from Mr. Robinson, under date Lots, and marked "Immediate."
